Program Note

In one Chinese tradition of painting, the artists intentionally leave large blank spaces in their renditions of natural landscapes. The blank spaces are intended to grant the viewers more room in using their imaginations. Now I know what you're thinking - but don't worry - I didn't compose this piece with large, silent spaces, leaving the listeners to imagine their own music. The title, Leaving White, refers instead to my own experience writing this piece. As a composer, I have found inspiration for my music in a variety of places: photography, life experiences, traffic signs, the periodic table of elements, and even internet search engines. But with this piece my compositional process was much different. I consciously tried to remove all extra-musical associations from my mind in order to leave my mind blank; thus leaving white.

The image displays a page from a musical score, likely for a symphony orchestra. The score is written in G major and 4/4 time. It includes parts for various instruments, including woodwinds, brass, strings, and percussion. The score is organized into systems, with each instrument or group of instruments having its own staff. The notation includes notes, rests, and dynamic markings such as p (piano), mp (mezzo-piano), mf (mezzo-forte), and ff (fortissimo). There are also markings for articulation and phrasing, such as slurs and accents. The percussion section includes a large 'G' in a box, indicating the key signature, and a 'ritard. poco a poco' marking, suggesting a gradual deceleration. The score is presented in a clear, professional layout, typical of a printed musical score.
